

PRELUDIO PARA UN RAPTO

PRELUDE TO A RAPTURE

By Abel Quintero

The Blue Hour is that brief space of time between sunset and the dark of night. It is a calm space where insects wake up and the clear moon is better observed over the pastel blue sky.

A yellow glow emerges from the windows along with smoke and the smell of freshly brewed coffee.

It is a warm, familiar, confident and intimate time.

The lover sees the hour arrive. His horse is ready, as is the hut that he has just built in a secret and distant place.

She is waiting for him at home dressed and with the things he will need wrapped in a linen sheet.

It's not time yet, it's just the blue hour...

They both wait for everyone in the house to sleep soundly so that she jumps out the window to get on the colt that awaits her, saddled, and that will lead them through tangled paths full of mute witnesses, to a new life.

This artwork was created in 2020. It is another foray by the artist into the Cuban peasant theme, but using new plastic resources that give it more spontaneity and a high note of surrealism.
